FINANCE AND TRADE.

OUR review of the cotton market last we a quited middling cotton in New York at 15c, on Tuesday it advanced to luje, but fell back to 16c on Friday New Orleans quoted 15gc, at which fig ure it remained throughout the week Liverpool quoted 744, as it had done for a month, on Friday it fell to 713-161. Memphis quoted loc, at which figure i remains and has done so ever since May 20th. This statement shows that cotton the last business week underwent but a very trifling change, a slight decline in Liverpool. That decline is of more significance than the mere amount would suggest, owing to the fact that it is the first change of price in that market since the fourth of May, and that it has been accompanied by a considerable decrease in sales. If receipts and stocks were still the sole governors o prices, position of prices would not be easy to account for, but the condition of the crops is now becoming the prime element in the If the state of the crop is such that the new season is likely to bring higher prices, then there will be a de sire to get as much of the cotton on hand, at present prices, as possible. If, on the contrary, a large crop and lower prices are auticipated, there will be eforts to reduce stocks on hand by the statements for the United States the cheaper cotton can be obtained. for the week ending Friday last: The news of the crops that reaches the various cotton exchanges in the cotton markels, is extremely favorable; the weather, putting seide the backwardness of spring, has been all that could be wished for; labor is plenty and cheap, Stock at interior towns and so much of corn and other grains American affoat. and vegetables have been cultivated, that the growers appear likely to be in an unusually independent position when their cotton gets to market. The last weekly cotton review of the New York Bulletin said: "The main object in view at present among the speculative interest is to keep control of as much of the remaining stocks as possible, in confer to the control of the remaining stocks as possible, in confer to the control of the remaining stocks as possible, in confer to the control of the remaining stocks as possible, in confer to the control of the remaining stocks as possible, in confer to the control of the remaining stocks as possible, in confer to the control of the remaining stocks as possible, in control of the control of the remaining stocks as possible, in control of the cont balance of the cotton year. With this n view, there has been a great amount buying in for June and selling out ions are developed leading to the belief that this cutlet is likely to be greatly widened at the moment. The closer interest shown by exporters, the ousiderable amounts lately sent abroad and the small receipts at the ports, all tend to bring matters into more compact shaps, and with the lease of power or some time enjoyed by operators for a decline, it is thought more than probable oversold. Indeed, some few sanguine lealers express a belief in a very severe twist' before the close of the season. From every section of the south the advices have been encouraging both as to ness and increasing stocks are severe y testing the strength of the market. On April 15th last the stock there stood at 873,640 bales; on May 20th, 988 300 bales. "Confidence in an ameliora to 1 Good midding 15-49 Good midding 15-49 Good midding 15-49-154 (15%) of the present depressing state of thicgs early revival in the trade demand. No and speculators -. speculative movement of consequence seems to be expected in the face of such | New York futures: large stock, but as the trade have te-

be condition and extent of the plantdueed their surplus supplies very considerably during the past six works, a healthy demand from that quarter is looked for. Should, however, there is no increase of business forthcaming after this week, the disappointment among holders will be very great, and although opinion is still against any material decline in prices, et the situation would become very trying and some decline might have to be submitted to." This concluding part of the opinion of the report proves to be

and that is a gratifying one—money is in less request at the banks than it was the above are the quotations of the less two or three weeks ago. The reason appears to be the promising condition of the crops, and the prospect of realizing something from wheat and other pro-ducts grown in the country around us. When "everything looks blue" the victim of deepair grasps at every chance, and borrows to the utmost of his means. But with hope and good prospects, such as now offers, there is an impulse to get along with as little aid as possible, and months bills is 3.5-16 per cent., or 3-16 along with as little aid as possible, and to stand on independent ground. This per cent. below the Bank of England sort of feeling has doubtless kept the rate. Amount of bullion gone into the to stand on independent ground. This sort of feeling has doubtless kept the demand for loans below what they would otherwise have been. From the very nature of things, however, there will be strong need for money before the next crop begins to reach the market, and August and September will be strong to the control of t see a tight time. Exchange is not sufficient to meet demands, which, however, are small, and currency is shipping at times. Rates remain precisely as before, but there appears to be some receipts, $334,000.
